Advice of Mother No Doubt Prevents Daughter's Untimely End.

Ready, Ky.—"I was not able to do anything for nearly six months," writes Mrs. Laura Bratcher, of this place, "and was down in bed for three months."

I cannot tell you how I suffered with my head, and with nervousness and womanly troubles.

Our family doctor told my husband he could not do me any good, and he had to give it up. We tried another doctor, but he did not help me.

At last, my mother advised me to take Cardui, the woman's tonic. I thought it was no use for I was nearly dead and nothing seemed to do me any good. But I took eleven bottles, and now I am able to do all of my work and my own washing.

I think Cardui is the best medicine in the world. My weight has increased, and I look the picture of health."

If you suffer from any of the ailments peculiar to women, get a bottle of Cardui today. Delay is dangerous. We know it will help you, for it has helped so many thousands of other weak women in the past 50 years.

MANN TELLS WHY IT IS REALLY WISE TO BEGIN DEFENSE

Home Industries Should Be Strengthened as Part of the National Defense.

Following is the speech delivered Tuesday in Congress by James R. Mann, Republican leader of the House of Representatives, on preparedness:

Mr. Speaker, in the quietude of my garden last summer and autumn I reached certain conclusions which I have hesitated to express, thinking that I might modify them. But as time has gone on and events have occurred, it has seemed to me more certain that my conclusions were right than when I first reached them, and I think, in justice to myself, and I hope with some slight benefit to the country, I ought to express those conclusions to the House.

It is well known in the House that I never have been a believer in a large standing army, and I suppose that I have been probably properly classed in what is sometimes referred to as the "little navy man." But wise men ought to be able to peer, maybe indistinctly, into the future, and to prepare today for what may come tomorrow. The world is in the most anomalous condition which mankind has ever seen. The greatest struggle of all the ages is going on now between the most powerful forces of the human race, between great nations and combinations of nations, until we are the only large, powerful nation not yet involved in that struggle. It is a break-up in the world, each side not merely fighting for its own existence, as it believes, but, as it seems to me, each side is fighting with the determination to put the other side, as it were, out of business. We have never had such a thing in the world before, with the same powerful influences at work.

The laws of civilization, international laws, the laws of humanity, are usually disregarded, at least more or less, when two great forces are fighting for mastery. With two men fighting, each believing that he is fighting for his life, each determined to take the life of the other, neither pays much attention to the desires, requests or demands of some less powerful person not engaged in the conflict.

I do not know, and no one knows, what will result from the present war. No one knows whether the aggression of one side or the other against our interests, many passively against our desires and contrary to our wishes now, finally lead us, perhaps not into this struggle but into some struggle which is the outcome of this one. I doubt whether a paper peace between the two struggling parties now, even if it could be entered into, would be even the beginning of the end. I think the present conflict is likely to last for many years before it is definitely determined either that one side or the other is the master, or that neither can become the master. And it seems to me that the part of wisdom for us is to fairly prepare ourselves for any possible trouble which may come. (Loud applause.)

It may be that we will have no trouble. I hope not. In this war I am neutral. I think we ought to maintain peace at all hazards. And yet the time may come when we will not have the determination whether we can maintain peace or not, because, however much we may desire peace, it is not within our power, with the feelings which we have, to stand aggression too far. It will be expensive to prepare for peace. Two years ago a billion dollars seemed a very large sum of money. No one would have believed two years ago that either England or Germany could carry on a war at the expense already involved, amounting to billions of dollars, an expense so great that the interest on the indebtedness would be sufficient ordinarily to maintain the government work. And the end of that indebtedness is not in sight. What may come out of such immense burdens of debt in these countries, even when peace may be declared, no one can tell. Revolutions are not improbable, and revolutions in the history of the world have usually led to aggression and disputes, and often to war with other countries. We can better afford today to spend hundreds of millions of dollars, or a few billions of dollars, in ample preparation for trouble and avoid it if possible, than we can wait for trouble and then spend untold billions before we are finally victors, as we would be. (Applause.) If we are involved in no trouble we will be getting off cheaply with the expenditures for preparation. If we should be involved in trouble the money we spend now will be worth manifold that which we would spend after the trouble began. (Applause.)

I know the gentlemen are sincere in their belief that there will be no trouble. I sympathize with those who prefer to spend the money of the people in the way of investment and aid of our own people at home rather than for the support of idle armies and navies. But when trouble does come, if it should come, there would be no dissenting voice against spending all our means, if necessary, to defend our country and our homes, and it were wise for us now, it seems to me, to begin our preparation.

I do not intend to discuss the details, though I have reached the conclusion myself that it were well, as an emergency measure, to increase our regular army to 250,000 or 300,000, or even half a million men. (Applause); that we should increase or provide for fortifications, that our coasts may be fairly, amply protected, and that we should provide a navy which will be able to defend us on the sea. I have much more fear in the end of war with Germany. (Applause.)

Events are coming rapidly in the world. We may sit by and wait in contentment, and yet it is our duty, as the managers of a great country and powerful people, to provide for their protection against possibilities as well as against certainties. I think, then, that we ought to provide these great forces; that it ought to be considered as an emergency matter, entirely apart from the ordinary routine or expense of government, without regard to partisanship or party lines. (Applause.) If England and France and Germany and Italy can consider their problems without party lines, a country like ours ought to be able to sweep away mere partisan considerations and try all to stand together, loyal to the country, in the effort to aid the administration of the government.

I think, further, that we ought to provide in some way for the building up and strengthening of our home industries, so that if we shall become involved in war we may be able to live within ourselves. (Applause.) And I think as far as possible that question should be considered entirely apart from former partisan opinion, in the hope that in some way we may get together in the interest of our country, if we should become involved in a struggle with a foreign power.

I have spoken thus very briefly, not with rhetoric or fancy phrases, because it seems to me that if there ever was a time in the history of our country when we ought to invite and receive expressions of opinion from all sides, this is one of the times, with a firm determination that out of it we will bring results; a combination of the opinions of all, without expressing the views of any, which we and all of our people may stand for, that we may uphold in the future our national honor and our national integrity, and, it seems to me possibly our modern civilization, which I fear may break down on the other side of the water. Let us try to think what is for the best of our country, what we would do if we had, each one, the supreme authority and responsibility. If it were placed upon each one to determine whether he would take the chance of disaster in the future, or prepare now to prevent that disaster. (Prolonged applause.)

PROSTRATION

Of Industry and Commerce after European War Predicted for United States.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 27.—Predicting a period of "feverish activity" in this country during the continuance of the war and upon its close a prostration of the industry and commerce of all countries, Alba B. Johnson, president of the Baldwin locomotive works, in the opening address at the Third National Foreign trade convention in New Orleans today emphasized the necessity for a truly national foreign trade policy which would prepare the United States for the keener competition expected to prevail in the world markets after the war. He said:

"It will be necessary for us to learn team work, by which is meant co-ordination of the efforts of manufacturer, merchant, banker and investor. Hitherto our bankers have been reluctant to enter the field of foreign finance; commission houses have too frequently been free-lances, pushing trade along the lines of least resistance or not in such a way as to create permanent and reliable trade. Our manufacturers have had to fight single-handed for their foreign trade, and it is wonderful how well they have succeeded in view of the conditions of competition which they had had to meet."

"The creation of the Federal Trade Commission must prove to be of great benefit to our manufacturers and exporters. It is studying with minds free from prejudice the complicated problems which affect our export trade and I am sure they will remove any doubts as to the rights of the Americans to arrange for combinations for foreign trade such as are lawful for their competitors of other nations."

Mr. Johnson called attention to the possibility of economic alliance among those countries which had united their fortunes for war, and upon the possible adverse effect of such policies upon the trade of the United States.

SOUTH AMERICA FEELS EFFECTS OF WORLD WAR

And Routine of Life is Thrown Very Much Out of Gear in That Country.

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 27.—The influences of the war in Europe are being felt acutely in South America. The routine of life, as fixed by the seasons and their phenomena, is thrown out of gear. Immigration returns for the first time in many years, show a balance of emigration. This is attributed to the exodus of Italian reservists who have rallied to the colors with enthusiasm and spontaneity. In normal times the Italian and Spanish immigrants flock in about equal numbers to the harvest fields of Argentina. The exodus has gone on in the same proportion, for it is a peculiar fact, one which no one seeks to explain, that the Spaniards, as if acted upon by some sympathetic influence are leaving by every passenger steamer. It cannot be said that they are going in greater numbers, for the simple reason that all those who are not radicated in the republic already have drifted away.

This shifting of labor is not strange, but, occurring at a period when hands are most needed, and wages are highest, it causes a certain feeling of uneasiness. One good result is that national and provincial authorities have been induced to think more seriously of their natural sources of human energy, and how to organize them. The country is so large that with ample railroad facilities the unemployed hands in the North, for example, could be shifted to the South, where at a given period of the year, extreme difference of climatic conditions prevail. This organization, so far has not made itself apparent by results.

Idlers Cause Trouble.
At the present moment there is a considerable number of unemployed in the Pampa territory near what may be called the geographical center of the republic. Having drifted there, these elements are causing considerable trouble by their truculent and menacing attitude. As the territories are, of course, under national administration fifty men of the metropolitan police armed with rifles and well equipped with ammunition have been sent down to reinforce the local police and maintain order. The department of labor declares that had these elements been amenable to control they would not have drifted, at the precise moment when they were wanted elsewhere, to a point at which they were not required. It is, however, difficult to organize elements so illiterate that they cannot read.

Another serious effect of the war is that freightage vessels are few and rates exceedingly high. The amount of Argentine produce held up for lack of transport is very large. An idea of its magnitude can be gathered from the following facts which, relating to a few zones, may be regarded as common to all. The Great Central Argentine railroad system, ramifying through the central northern and northern provinces report that over 200,000 tons of wheat and linseed of the last harvest are still waiting to be moved.

In Rosario, the depot of the North, there is at least the same quantity of corn of the same harvest stored and waiting for export. In addition there are 800,000 tons stored in outlying stations ready to be forwarded to the port of Rosario en route for the consuming markets. There is, therefore, a plethora of grain already, and the stock is being rapidly increased as operations upon the harvest proceed. At the time of writing about forty per cent of the season's wheat and linseed has been collected, the quality and yield being very satisfactory. The corn plantations, favored Happy Old Age.

When old age carries with it hosts of friends, good health and an abundance of this world's goods, it should be as happy as any period of our existence. That is old age as it should be, but too often it means poor digestion, torpid bowels, a sluggish liver and a general feeling of ill health, despondency and misery. This condition can be greatly alleviated, however, by taking one of Chamberlain's Tablets each day immediately after supper. That will strengthen the digestion, tone up the liver and regulate the bowels, then that feeling of despondency will give way to one of hope and good cheer. Obtainable everywhere.—Advertisement.

It all means congestion, loss and low prices for the farmers who are always in need of ready money. In the meantime, the freighters which should be carrying the harvest of South America to the ports of Europe and feeding the industries of the Old Continent, are acting as transports carrying troops and stores to the war.

Locally it is difficult to measure the possible loss direct and collateral, caused by this dislocation of commercial currents when the war is over. The consequences of the war will persist. It will be a long time before the ports of this republic are again full of shipping from the seven seas, as they were a few years ago when, to relieve the pressure, the port of Buenos Aires extension works were decided upon and pushed forward. That great undertaking, by the way, is now paralyzed, nothing in the nature of an amicable arrangement or compromise having been reported.

Wool Cornered.
The German residents in Argentina, where they form a very influential and well organized community, acting upon instructions from Berlin, or upon their own initiative, have created a corner in wool. They have, in fact, bought up the whole available clip which is destined for shipment to Germany when the war is over, and the German mercantile flag is once more seen in South American waters. Naturally, this bulk in store occupies a good deal of the not unlimited space for storage in Argentina. But the Germans are happy about the matter, since, in addition to having secured the goods they have prevented the British and French from replenishing their supplies from the River Plate sources.

Within ten months will occur the periodical (six years) change of national administration. The election of president and vice president should occur within the next three months, but up to the present there are no candidates before the country. Rumors are afloat almost daily only to enjoy a very precarious period of languid life and die a natural death. There are no candidates and apparently no real interest shown by the public.

COLONIES
Of West Virginia Are to Be Established in Calhoun County in Florida.

CHARLESTON, Jan. 27.—A party of West Virginia capitalists composed of J. W. Brown, E. B. Stanton, J. D. Pribble and W. J. Clark have purchased a 6,000 acre tract of land in Calhoun county, Fla., for colonization purposes. The gentlemen after making an inspection of these lands were so favorably impressed by them that they made an immediate purchase of the 6,000 acre tract. They stated it was their intention to return at once to West Virginia and organize colonies to occupy these lands in the very near future. Calhoun county is sparsely settled and presents an inviting aspect to both the colonies and the colonist.
